

Terry Takes to Twitter

Say hello to a new type of political sound bite — just make sure you do it in 140 characters or less.

U.S. Rep. Lee Terry plans to hold a Twitter Town Hall meeting this afternoon, responding to questions from constituents via his Twitter account. The questions will come from Twitter and Terry will respond via Twitter, which for the un-Twitterish folks amongst us will limit Terry's responses to 140 characters or less. (By the way, the above paragraph sooo exceeded the limit.)

This virtual, 30-minute gathering will start at 3 p.m.. To attend, go to www.twitter.com/leeterryne. Questions must include the hashtag #ne02 or #omaha.

Take note, however. Terry will be accepting some live questions but many of them have been pre-submitted and pre-selected by his staff, said Max Weiss, Terry's spokesman.
